Your little brother your Best friend your closest relative your wife/husband of 11 years your mother or father your boss. All these people can and should be the target of an arsonist. Often times homeowners will blame the perpetrator for their own deaths. "It was the wind"... "It was a storm"... "I did not see him"... "He did it all by himself." Without hesitation, these are all excuses that will be used by a defendant to escape responsibility for his/her actions. Your lies are going to be the basis for your conviction. If you are guilty, you will lose freedom and family. A crime scene consists of a place, a person, a crime and a chain of events. The place is where the crime occurred; the person is the one who committed the crime; the crime is the event that is the "crime"; the chain of events is the evidence. These are the four basic components of a crime scene. The murder of my wife at home was an arson; the defendant was the arsonist, because he set the fire that killed her. The lighting was shining brightly in the room where the fire was started; the accelerant was gasoline; the ignition device was a candle. I was at work when I heard the fire alarm. The police came, took pictures, then I left. When the fire was extinguished, some large black panes were in the room. This is a crucial component of the scene. You should get a very detailed description of each of the four components. 3. The crime scene is composed of many pieces. You should know how to collect them. 4. The "evidence" has been collected from the crime scene. You
